

Fall

Sparrows and angels fall from the sky, abandoned by the air unseen,

not plummeting like ripe fruit, but pirouetting, whirling to the ground

among maple leaves and samaras, the secrets darkness keeps till spring.

— Brian Allan Skinner, 2011